

FOUR SMALL FARES SINCE YESTERDAY

GILL NETTERS BROUGHT BULK OF RECEIPTS DURING THE AFTERNOON.

Four small fares of fish from draggers and trawlers have been landed here since yesterday, the total amounting to only 8000 pounds. Gill netters hauling their gear yesterday after a day's lay-off, brought 50,000 pounds of fish, the scalers going to split. Heavy weather kept the fleet in port during the day, but this morning several of the craft broke away for the grounds.

Lighthouse Change.

Notice has been issued to shipping interests that Canal Channel lights 12A and 17A, at the westerly approach to Cape Cod Canal which were destroyed recently, will be rebuilt.

Cod Liver Oil.

The cod liver oil market is generally dull at this time of the year before the opening up of the new season. This should be a time of stock-taking and of formulating plans for the operation of the industry throughout another season. Unless something is done to make it more profitable to fisherman and refiner we may witness an additional falling off in production again this year. Nothing can be said against the quality of our oil, but unless we can compete in price on consuming markets no great progress will ever be made. Let the industry get down to the facts concerning the overhead in the cost of production and formulate some plan whereby Newfoundland cod-liver oil can meet the price of other oil-producing countries.—St. John's Trade Review.

NO ARRIVALS HERE TODAY.

STORM PREVENTED SMALLER
BOATS FROM FISHING
YESTERDAY.

Not a pound of fish of any kind has been landed here since yesterday, due to the fact that all of the small draggers and trawlers were laying up waiting for the easterly to flatten down. None of the gill netters ventured outside of the Point, either, conditions being bad for hauling of gear.
